Founder and Owner

Apartment Homes TLC

The people at Apartment Homes TLC want their customers to have an experience with them and think, "Wow, there's something distinctively different about that company,"-something that makes you feel at home, knowing that you matter.

Apartment Homes TLC is different because Angela, the founder and owner of the company, never set out to be a business owner. In fact, it happened by default when Angela couldn't find a company that she could align her "old-fashioned" values with. There is nothing traditional about how Apartment Homes TLC does business. Angela adds, "We're not governed by cash flow charts or return on investment models, but rather by the Golden Rule, and we've found it to be the secret to our success. We strive to put others first, and by doing so we discover the best within ourselves. It is through what we gain by serving others that provides us the means to magnify our positions."

Angela M. Beaver, originally from Atlanta, Georgia, began working in the apartment industry at the early age of 14, where she became the top producer while still in her first month of training. Before completing high school, Angela went on to break the company's nationwide records all while working part-time. At the age of 21, Angela opened and managed her first office, and two years later, another firm recruited her to expand its business into a new territory. In 2001, at the age of 25, Angela became the founder and owner of Apartment Homes TLC.
